Week	Projects / Activities
1	At the first week, I started learning Laravel, a PHP framework used for web application development. The company provided me with their website files as a reference, which greatly aided my understanding of practical applications of Laravel.
2	In Week 2, I began my own project using Laravel. This involved planning and designing a web application for users to buy phones, laptops, and tablets. I was responsible for setting up the project environment, creating the initial database schema, and developing the basic functionality of the application, including product listing, user registration, and shopping cart features.
3	In Week 3, I continued to work on my web application project adding more features and improving the overall functionality and user experience. I participated in the company's project, where I was taught how to test an application called Agroz App and its Content Management System (CMS). This involved understanding the testing procedures, identifying bugs, and suggesting improvements.
4	In Week 4, I participated in an online meeting about the Agroz app. During this meeting, I demonstrated the features of the app and explained how to use it to attendees. This presentation involved showing the app's functionalities and addressing any questions or feedback from the participants. I also began creating test scripts to automate the testing process for the Agroz Grower App. This included writing and implementing scripts to test various functionalities of the app to ensure its reliability and performance.
